WINEMAKER: Thibaut Delmotte

Sauvignon Blanc is the white variety that best adapts itself to the extreme conditions of Altura Máxima: it sprouts after the late frosts in spring and ripens before the early frosts in autumn.

The moderate daytime temperatures, below 30°C, and the wide temperature range, more than 20 degrees difference between day and night, allow the wine to preserve an excellent natural acidity.

The poor and stony soil produces a very high quality and sophisticated grape. The scent of white fruits and minerals is enhanced by an elegant herbal touch.

Since 2005, Winemaker Thibaut Delmotte has crafted wines of distinction and international acclaim for Bodega Colomé, while staying true to its French origins.
